BUSINESSMEN GATHER AT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ANNUAL MEETING

Reports Show Great Progress Made During Past Twelve Months In Redwood City

One of the most important meetings held by the Chamber of Commerce of this city took place Wednesday evening at which time the annual election of directors took place, and the achievements of the body during the past year were reviewed.

The meeting was presided over by James Hodge, and a program put forward which was both interesting and instructive. The chief speaker of the evening was Wendell Thomas, secretary-manager of the San Jose Chamber of Commerce, Thomas' address was one of solid business sense and was replete with helpful ideas for the businessmen of this city.

As this was the time for the election of officers for the coming year, nominations were opened and the results of the nominating committee had been selected previously by President Hinman was received. The ballot showed the following to have been elected: Asa Hull, E. B. Hinman, Henry Witte, Zephro Thompson, William Duesel, Gilman Merrill, John Gibson and Harold Powers. The newly elected directors will hold their first meeting next Wednesday, at which time they will elect one of their number as president.

Retiring President Elmore B. Hinman rendered his annual report, showing not only what had been accomplished by the Chamber during the year, but also the work of developing the town, but also that the body had been placed on a firm financial basis. Not only has the chamber managed to pay its bills, Hinman reported, but has now a balance in the treasury and has paid all bills which have been outstanding for several years.

The message of President Hinman was as follows:

"One of the functions of the Chamber of Commerce office which is quite important and little appreciated is that of hearing and rejecting a great many propositions, many of which are well meant and good enough in themselves but inappropriate or not adapted to the needs of this community. All sorts of schemes are proposed and every effort made to secure the backing and endorsement of the Chamber. Many of these ill-considered projects, save our members as well as all residents of the community a great deal of time and money.

"The chamber of commerce performs a service in the community which no other body can undertake. The board of directors renders this service during the past year to the best of their ability, with the funds and facilities available.

"The business of the body is to sell this service to the community from you in the form of dues. We look upon it as any other business. You, as members, must be sold on the idea and purpose of the Chamber of Commerce and must be convinced that you are getting proper return for your expenditures.

"With this idea in mind, we have given, first: To build up your confidence in the organization and to stimulate your interest. A necessary foundation upon which to build an active, useful chamber of commerce.

"There is a tendency to adopt a 'let George do it' spirit after the annual meeting and forget your responsibilities for another year. Let me impress upon you that the chamber of commerce belongs to you. You are the chamber of commerce. The success of the year's work will depend largely on how you respond when called upon from time to time to assist.

"We desire to enlist all the leaders of the community in our work and to that end have invited here tonight the ministers of the various churches, the president of the Women's Club and others. The success and growth of clubs and churches is largely dependent on the growth of the town. The past year has witnessed the building of two new churches in Redwood City and others are projected. These are district assets to us and we commend those whose energy and loyalty in the community has brought these improvements to completion. We solicit for the chamber of commerce your support and the co-operation in furthering all the future developments in which we are mutually interested. Give the chamber of commerce the favorable notice as you can and be assured that such support will be greatly appreciated.

"The income during the past year has been little more than sufficient for the barest expenses of the office, which expenses have been reduced to a very modest minimum. Many towns of less population are giving much more for chamber of commerce purposes. Much more money could be used here to good purpose in a judicious way. There are many substantial people who stand to benefit greatly by the efforts of the chamber of commerce who should be members and we recommend a campaign to bring these people in to share in the expense. No doubt you will be glad to do so. This should be one of the first activities of the new board of directors to be elected tonight.

"Few communities have the natural resources for future development that we enjoy in Redwood City. We must act together with our time, money and influence to turn these resources into a business asset that will bring profit in the years to come."

The report showed that the sum of $2,894.37 had been received by the chamber of commerce during the year. Expenses had been divided as follows:

Salaries	$937.75
Lights	22.33

Hull reported that progress was being made in this work and that rights of way were being secured where the breaks make new rights of way necessary.

A letter from Representative Arthur Free was read by President Hinman in regard to the harbor development situation. Free stated that nothing can be done on the Congress until from Major Schultz of the war department. Representative Free promised to do whatever he can to further the local project.

PULGAS HIGHWAY COMMITTEE WORKING ON EXTENSION

The committee appointed by the board of supervisors recently to investigate the feasibility of securing rights of way for making the Alameda de las Pulgas a continuous roadway held an important meeting last Monday at the home of H. C. Tuchsens on Arch street.

Considerable progress has been made by the committee and the matter will be placed before the board of supervisors in a tangible form within a short time. It is now planned to secure the services of one of the most eminent municipal lawyers to straighten out any technical difficulties which may arise.

It is the plan of the committee to use all sections of the Alameda de las Pulgas where it now exists, that is between Belmont and Oak Knoll district where a continuous roadway is at present built, and from the Woodside road to the county line. It will be necessary to secure rights of way for the road along the intervening line. Most of this land has already been promised, and it is felt that the completion of the road is now practically assured.

When completed, the Alameda de las Pulgas can be extended chiefly along existing roadways to Beresford and then on into the north end of the county, and south into Los Altos. This extension being almost entirely over existing roads, it is felt would be comparatively inexpensive and would provide a road which would parallel the highway for almost the entire length of the county, not only relieving the traffic of the present highway, but opening up many beautiful tracts now inaccessible.

Druid Circle No. 100 will hold a whist party on January 25. The committee is headed by Mrs. A. Garity.

Miss Alva Silva, girl athlete of Redwood City, who was quite ill last week, is reported to be much improved.

A number of members of George H. Evans Post of the Women's Relief Corps attended the installation of officers of the McKinley Corps in Palo Alto last week.

Mr. Harry Owen is the sympathy of the community in the loss of her father who passed away in the county of Cheshire, England. Mrs. Owen received the sad news just a week after her husband, Rev. Harry Owen, had learned of the death of his mother in the same county.

The members of the Ladies Aid of the Methodist church are preparing for a food sale to be held on the first Saturday of February. No location has been secured as yet. This sale will be announced later.

Mr. and Mrs. Bordenave of San Francisco, spent the week end with the latter's mother, Mrs. Cullen of this city.

The deceased has for a number of years conducted an awning and auto top business just south of Redwood City. He recently completed a shop for this purpose on the highway, near Selby Lane.

He was a native of Sweden and was 42 years of age. He leaves a wife, Mrs. Mary E. Larson, two sons, Stanley A. and John R. Larson, and an aunt, Mrs. C. Malmberg.

Rev. Harry Owen, pastor of the Methodist church, who has been quite ill at his home here for some time, was removed on Thursday to the Mills Memorial hospital for treatment. His name will soon be confirmed. He is under the care of Dr. J. P. H. D. Kes.

Both of the young people are well known and popular and are members of well-known local families. Mrs. Poole is a sister of Mrs. J. Turner of Arch street, with whom she had been making her home. She had been making her home. She had been making her home.

The groom is the elder son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Poole. He is a graduate of Stanford university, and is now engaged with his father in a lucrative business in Redwood City.

Sunday, January 24th, will be the great day of St. Peter's Parish. The ministers and their congregations have been invited to take part in the services which are to be held in the new parish building at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of that day.

It is the aim of the parish building a meeting place for dances and card parties, dinner and club meetings, a place of worship on Sundays by a simple arrangement of draperies, which completely transforms the auditorium into a church.

The detail of the parish building will be on display after the service Sunday afternoon and the public is cordially invited to inspect their new community center.

The regular program of the church will be in order for the regular services, with Rev. Dr. A. E. Clay officiating. Bishop Parsons, who needs no introduction to the people of this community, will officiate in the afternoon service, and it is hoped that the church will be crowded to welcome him.

NEW COAST ROAD SURVEY ORDERED

In compliance with a recommendation filed recently by the San Mateo County Grand Jury that a new road be built from the county menlo park to connect with the Skline boulevard, the board of supervisors last Monday instructed County Engineer George Knoke to survey such a road. The route recommended will avoid the present grade over Haskins hill and will join with the Skyline road near the Shriners' park in the Alpine district. It is claimed for this route that it would shorten the distance from Pescadero to the county seat several miles and would also eliminate some bad mountain grades.

At the same time the board at the suggestion of Supervisor Thompson voted to have the California State Automobile Association erect a distinctive sign at the intersection of the Skyline road and the Redwood City La Honda road. Many motorists here and in the city to the south, in seeking to turn from the Skyline road to go to La Honda, become confused and turn into the road leading to Redwood City.

The property is on the corner of Cassia and Phelps streets, and contains a large house, formerly the Gordon home.

It was rumored yesterday that the Alexander Gordon home on Phelps street, the property of Mrs. Gertrude Morgan, had been sold this week by A. Heimer to a wealthy Atherton resident. The property is on the corner of Cassia and Phelps streets, and contains a large house, formerly the Gordon home.

Fleming would have reached his eighty-sixth year had he lived until April first next. The eclipse of his long career is closed. Fleming was forgotten by the present generation, but fifty years ago the name of Jack Fleming was a byword in the county. Everyone knew him and he knew everyone.

He is survived by a son living at San Jose and a daughter residing in Oakland.

Almost a Pioneer Fleming was born in the County of Tipperary, Ireland, almost 86 years ago. As a boy he went before the mast, sailing from his native land to the East India Company, and arrived in San Francisco in 1859 from China. Shortly afterward he came to this county, doing his first work for the late Christopher Bolinger, who resided on a ranch near Belmont. Later he went to Halfmoon Bay to conduct a dairy for the late James Dinnison. He was active during the civil war raising funds and recruits for the army and soon his ability became known. Fleming then blossomed out as a politician. An aspirant for office in the county had first to make his peace with Jack before trying to be elected. Owing to the vast amount of farming done in those days on the coast, the bulk of the population of the county was located there. That section held the balance of power. Jack would appear at the county conventions with his delegates and swing the meeting to suit himself.

Port Collector at Halfmoon Bay His power and influence were felt in these gatherings, and prospective candidates for office courted his support. Fleming was fair and always dealt honestly with his friends. He was always a staunch republican and worked for his party in fair and foul weather. The time came when he wanted some reward for his fealty. This was in the early seventies. He went to the late Timothy Guy Phelps, then collector of the Port of San Francisco, and asked to be made collector of Port at Halfmoon Bay, the position then being held by the late J. C. Maynard. Phelps then sent in Fleming's name to Washington for appointment. The collector was surprised at the few weeks to have the approval of the proper authorities. He sent for Jack. After considerable investigation it was learned that one J. P. Ames, afterwards the warden at San Quentin, and a boss friend of Fleming's, was seeking the appointment for Bill Clark. Fleming's ire was aroused. He went to Sacramento, where the legislature was in session. He secured the endorsement of the senators and at once sent it to his friend, C. G. Gorham, then secretary of the U. S. Senate, who placed the paper in the proper hands so that in a few days Jack received his coveted appointment. He never forgave Ames for his treachery. The annual business meeting and banquet of the Congregational church was held Thursday evening in the church parlors. About two hundred were present.

Reports were received from the various departments, and officers were elected for the coming year. All reports showed the church to be in a flourishing condition. The report of Wilbur Dossie, superintendent of the Sunday School showed an average attendance at that institution of 180 during the year. The greatest attendance at the Sabbath school was at Easter when there were 260 children present.

The pastor's report showed an increase of 100 in the church membership during the year. C. H. Woodcock, the treasurer, reported that $2,200 had been collected during the year for the current expenses and that there was a balance in the treasury. In addition to this amount $1150 had been collected for the church benevolences, and had been turned over to the missionary fund. All reports showed a like increase.

FORMER POLITICAL BOSS OF SAN MATEO COUNTY PASSES AWAY

Man Who Once Weilded Greatest Influence In Politics, Dies In Poorhouse

Jack Fleming is no more. The man who at one time held the political destinies of San Mateo county in the palm of his hand passed away at the county poor farm at 5:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, alone, friendless and forgotten.

There was no one to smooth his fevered brow, no one to console and comfort him in his last moments when he was about to depart on his long journey. During the morning he received the last sacraments of his church and then calmly awaited the visit of the Grim Reaper for he knew his hour had come for him to pass on, out and over the Great Divide. He was ready to answer the call.

Yesterday afternoon he was laid away in the Potter's Field of the Poor Farm. Superintendent Eubanks of the farm and the attendants stood over the grave as it was being filled. A simple wooden cross will mark the last resting place of the once political leader of the county who in his time dominated and named candidates and had hundreds doing his bidding.

Fleming would have reached his eighty-sixth year had he lived until April first next. The eclipse of his long career is closed. Fleming was forgotten by the present generation, but fifty years ago the name of Jack Fleming was a byword in the county. Everyone knew him and he knew everyone.

THE ALL-AROUND MAN

NOWHERE, we believe, in the history of this or any other nation, can be found a man who has shown himself a leader in so many lines of work as that great statesman-printer, whose 220th birth anniversary was observed by the nation last Sunday. Benjamin Franklin, originally a printer proved himself not only the best printer in the world at that time but he engaged in the allied work of type casting and engraving, then became one of the leading statesmen of America, one of the great diplomats of the world, one of the great authors of his time, one of the leading philosophers of the new world, and finally made the discovery which hastened the invention of the electrical apparatus which has wrought such wonders in the past century.

Born in Boston, January 17, 1706, Franklin learned the printer's trade, and in 1724 became owner and publisher of the Pennsylvania Gazette. This was the beginning of a life of extraordinary achievements. In 1731 he founded the Pennsylvania Library; in 1732 began the now famous Poor Richard's Almanac. In 1736 Franklin was elected clerk of the Pennsylvania assembly, the following year he was made postmaster of Philadelphia. In 1743 he founded the American Philosophical Society and in the same year the University of Pennsylvania. In 1753 he was chosen postmaster general to the British colonies in America, a position he held until 1774. He was a delegate to the Continental Convention in 1775, and in 1776 was a member of the committee of five which drew up the Declaration of Independence. From 1785 to 1788 Benjamin Franklin was president of Pennsylvania, and was a member of the constitutional convention in 1787, where he took a leading part in drawing up the constitution, which has so well withstood the vicissitudes of time.

In 1776 Franklin was ambassador to France, where in conjunction with Arthur Lee and Silas Deane he was able to secure the recognition of the American colonies by France. In 1882, he with Jay and Adams, drew up that second great treaty, the Treaty of Paris, whereby the colonies were granted their freedom.

It was in 1752 that Franklin was able to demonstrate that electricity then only known as an experimental force of no real utility, was in reality, a great force abounding in nature with unlimited possibilities.

Any one of the above accomplishments would have seemed a worth-while work for an ordinary life, and taken all together, they must have kept the great man constantly alert, yet during his lifetime, he found time to write works, which aggregate about ten volumes. He was also one of the most active members of the Masonic fraternity, and we know that he devoted much time to the work of his lodge, and occupied many important positions in the Masonic lodge room.

Franklin truly lead a "concentrated" life, making every minute count for something accomplished. Yet in spite of his great achievements, history always shows him to us as a plain, honest, unostentatious printer, wearing the homespun woollens of his homeland at the lace befrilled court of France. Plain in dress that the humblest of the French nobles, he was greater in ability than any other statesman that the world has produced. A versatile genius.

NEEDED-ROOM TO GROW

SEVENTY years ago when Redwood City consisted of a few scattering shacks laid out along the most frequented trails in the vicinity of the embarcadero or landing, the fact that the then unimportant A street ran into Main street, the chief business street and ended there made little difference. At that time the chief center of business was that bit of territory immediately south on Main street of what is now Broadway. Here were the offices of the Hanson Ackerson Lumber yards, here the American house, the Mongahela saloon, Diller's store and all of the other pioneer businesses.

Later when A street became Bridge street, there was still little need of extending it in an easterly direction. Main street still maintained its supremacy as a business street. Here were still the Grand hotel, the Redwood House, the Alhambra theatre, P. P.

Chamberlain's general merchandise store and other leading businesses of that time.

Now we have another situation. Business is slowly and surely concentrating on Broadway. Now the fact that this street ends abruptly at Main street becomes a serious handicap. The termination of the street makes an abrupt unpassable barrier to business development at this end of Broadway and is forcing business into the new territory west of the railway. This in itself is not a detriment. In fact it has resulted in starting what bids fair to become the chief business section of Redwood City between the highway and the railway. The bad feature of the affair is that this barrier to business has produced a condition of undevelopment in that whole section in the rear of Main street property, a section which should have an opportunity to grow as well as the rest of the town.

The time has come when Broadway should be extended to Chestnut street. This development would cause a corresponding development of property to the east of Main street. The increased valuation of this property should of itself warrant the work to say nothing of the benefit which would accrue to other business property on Broadway and on the adjacent portions of Main street.

THE movement started by the chamber of commerce to have a road constructed to the Dumbarton bridge from Redwood City is an excellent one. The big span will soon be finished. The vast travel over the bridge should be bid for by the business men of this city and the only way to divert the travel this way is to secure a route as direct as possible to the approach on this side. Some one has suggested that a road paralleling the Dumbarton railroad be constructed. This would be quite feasible and proper but the cost of such a thoroughfare would be beyond the reach of the people. It would take an expenditure of over a half million dollars to secure such a road. The only reasonable route is through the Sweeny property and on a road laid out some years ago by the late Myles D. Sweeny. This road connects with the Bay Road at the old Sweeny home. The Carnduff Lane which is the direct course to the bridge approach, taps the Bay Road two miles from the Sweeny home. The only real expense would be the grading and macadamizing the street through the Sweeny field. The cost would be nominal and the greater portion of the travel would thereby be directed this way. The road would serve until the Bayshore highway would be built and fill every want. The route suggested is the only one that should be considered by the people of Redwood City.

Cleaning Without Odor by the F. Thomas Process

Our many years of experience has taught us that it is impossible to do perfect cleaning with cheap, inferior methods. That is why we found it necessary to invest nearly $500,000 in the equipment of a plant and the establishment of an expert organization to do the quality of work demanded by our customers.

With the "F. Thomas Process" we not only remove every particle of dust but we return your garments without that usual disagreeable smell of gasoline. Every drop of gasoline we use in cleaning is redistilled and very highly refined.

Raw gasoline—the kind that you buy for your automobile—is full of heavy oils and unfit for cleaning fabrics. It is little better than ordinary distillate and leaves a sickening gasoline smell in your clothes.
